Java, Collections Framework, File Handling, Multithreading, Exception Handling

- Developed a console-based Java application that helps students record and track daily study activities.
 - Designed a StudyLog model class with date, subject, duration and description fields using OOP principles.
 - Stored and managed study records in an ArrayList using the Java Collections Framework.
 - Implemented file handling to persist study data, with exception handling for reliable user input and file operations.
 - Used multithreading for background and task-related operations.

Java, Spring Boot, MongoDB, REST APIs

- Developed a full-stack Java-based classroom and student management application using Spring Boot and MongoDB.
 - Implemented RESTful CRUD APIs for creating, updating, deleting, and retrieving batch and student records.
 - Designed batch management features to maintain batch details, schedules, duration, trainer information, and associated students.
 - Integrated MongoDB for NoSQL data storage and implemented backend services for efficient management of application data.
 - Built a Java-based client application to interact with backend APIs using a client-server architecture.
